Addressing the Basic Needs, Facing the Current Challenges

Dear Zigen Friends:

In this year 2010, I visited the Yanshan Mountain region, Qinglong County, Hebei at the foot of the Great Wall; Shilou County, Shanxi on the banks of the Yellow River in the Loess Plateau; and Lankao County, Henan on the last bend of the Yellow River, which often flooded the central plains.

Zigen has a long history with these three counties, many old friends and new acquaintances were encountered. In particular, in July this year, a selected group of 40 teachers from each county participating in Zigen-sponsored "rural seed teachers training program" held an in-depth discussion. The Qinglong Center School principal Chengjin Wen, discussing the teachers' training, excitedly said that he had "never participated in this form of training, and it was the first time he had personally experienced democratic, participatory teaching and learning." During the last decade, the Chinese Ministry of Education has implemented the new curriculum reform, requiring teachers to modify the teacher-centered teaching methods to be more in line with a student-centered teaching philosophy, requiring teachers to use participatory teaching methods; but for many teachers in rural areas like him, this was just a verbal concept. "Following participatory teacher training with ourselves as students, I personally experienced this approach to training, and I now know that the old teaching method does not have the necessary attitude of equality and democracy for the education of students."

Zigen's development of the "rural seed teachers training program" took nearly five years; in collaboration with a team of teachers from Southwest University, twelve themes were set through field observations and interviews. A more comprehensive view of rural education and cultivating a local teachers training team to train other teachers locally are the goals of the program. In the three pilot counties this can be said to be very successful, and the reason for the success is because of its relevance in meeting current teacher needs.

In these three counties, I visited Zigen-supported elementary, middle and high school and vocational school students, most of whom are orphans, or from poor single-parent families or those with family members seriously ill. In junior high schools in poor regions of China, some schools have one-third of students who do not graduate and become child labor in the market. China's policy of nine years of free compulsory education has been implemented for six years; the policy waives book and tuition fees for students, but poor families cannot bear the high food, boarding and transportation costs, and as a result some children are not afforded access to basic education. When the students are asked about what they want to do in the future, some want to become engineers and policemen, but more want to become rural teachers. Almost all "want to help the people who need help, just as Zigen does."

At a primary school supported by Zigen, I saw the drawings of 4th and 5th graders all had content related to environmental protection. I was very surprised because there is very little material on environmental protection in Chinese school education; it turned out that a Zigen-supported university student volunteer had come to support teaching and brought with him some material on protecting the environment, which the children absorbed enthusiastically and then spread to their parents.

After 22 years, from supporting girls going to school in the beginning to teachers training, village leaders training and environmental education in rural schools at present, there have been many additions to the project contents, but the support for a large number of scholarships has remained. Currently, these are focused on orphans and children of single-parent families. Often I heard people saying that Zigen “has too many projects, not focused enough, and needs a flag ship project”. However, Zigen is a village-rooted and community-based grassroots organization, and Zigen’s staff members have put down their roots in the countryside for many years and lived amongst the villagers, have a wealth of experience and a direct understanding of the poor villagers’ most urgent basic needs. They have searched for the most effective solutions with the local people, and sought a wide range of support. But the basic needs of a community are multi-dimensional and not solitary; therefore, Zigen’s projects which address the community’s current un-met basic needs must also be multi-faceted and holistic.

Shigezhuang, Beijing is a community of almost 400,000 migrant workers where Zigen has established a migrant workers community center. I have met with more than 20 students from various universities, each of whom is the leader of a squad to exchange ideas on how each squad leader is to lead several volunteers in performing volunteer work. What is their volunteer work? In fact, many children of migrant workers encounter many difficulties in their studies and growing up, and the instability of teachers at the schools for migrant worker’s children result in their not being able to receive a quality education. Parents are busy with work and cannot give their children the needed guidance. These university student squad leaders mobilize their schoolmates to make friends with these children on an individual basis, and make weekend home visits or give homework lessons. These diverse and innovative projects are all developed and designed by these young university students using their practical experience together with local Zigen workers.

Zigen is a bridge connecting many outsiders wishing to engage in public welfare work, enabling them to go directly to the grassroots, directly contact the poorest people and understand their needs, identify problems and collectively designing solutions and creative project content. Of course these projects need more time and efforts to improve, but in the course of this process, I also clearly see the personal growth of those who participate in Zigen’s work.

After a stay of eight months amongst the mountains and rivers of the Chinese countryside and cities, I returned to Zigen’s birthplace, New York City. At the Zigen office in Queens, New York, a group of Zigen volunteers were working intensely because the newsletter was about to be published. Among these volunteers, the youngest was not yet 20, and the oldest was approaching 80; they were preparing to package the newsletters for mail delivery, and I clearly see that the world is so large and yet it is so small, it is truly a “global village”. A group of people, separated by thousands of mountains and waters but united by a concern for people in poverty, because of Zigen walked together for a common goal, little by little, over the long term and silently doing many small thing for this common goal. This goal is the hope that our future world can be more just, sustainable and peaceful.

Program Evolution

Overview

During the year 2010, China Zigen's village education development and promotion committee supported the theme "Human-Centered Sustainable Development". The theme continued its efforts to help China's multiple underprivileged regions; focused its support for specific local groups. It continues to support the slogan: "the school is the center, the village is the platform" because it helps to communicate between school and village. In which the entire community participates in developing a model; built a foundation from the grassroots level; and created different projects suitable for local characteristics.

During this year, we continued to support village education. It was the most important area of funding, in which we offered tuition supplements and scholarships for elementary, junior high, high school and college--especially for boarding school students who benefited from a better quality of life. We noticed that, with limited funds, the students' basic needs could be easily met and their educational experience improved greatly. We simultaneously developed value added trial projects for experiment and demonstration. These projects can lead to greater expansion.

Through its projects and sponsorship, China Zigen has helped to revitalize village communities. The emphasis of Zigen projects is to satisfy a community's basic needs while also improving the environment. From 2009, we began our trial of "one village, one school" projects, which involved the interaction between village and school.

Projects were well received and drew widespread attention from all parties concerned. In 2010, the "one village, one school" model went one step further. The scope of the project was expanded and the nature of the projects diversified, becoming more tailored to suit each community's particular needs.

The "one village, one school" projects continue to be a success, which underscores the fact that Zigen's long-term emphasis on basic education, adult education, hygiene, living conditions, and the environment has borne fruit.

At the same time, Zigen has assiduously strived to ensure the projects are well-run, adequately funded, and involve grassroots participation.

In 2010, we gave primary support to migrant workers. For individuals who left their village to work in a city, Zigen established an activity center to provide basic living services. The center helps form a platform that would pool together social resources, and to emphasize social unity and friendship.

Zigen project coordinator discussed with villagers about their needs.

During this year, Zigen continued to provide village training, which led to overwhelming results. Village teacher training is one of Zigen’s more established programs. It consists of supplying training materials (audio/video, computer, and ongoing support), references guidelines, a training team, a training curriculum, management, and support. Zigen’s training project is a vital component of enabling a village’s sustainable development.

With “the school is center, village is platform” and “one village one school” models, the city workers’ community center has undertaken multiple training and strategic projects.

Zigen also encourages collaboration with all levels of society to work jointly on public welfare projects—including reading, after school programs, environmental awareness education, volunteering, public education and etc.

We also aim to streamline our efficiency when we execute our projects. We take extra care to bring forth new ideas, test collaboration with different government levels and non-government organizations (NGOs), work jointly with many groups, and provide capital to support the projects. To maintain an even allocation of funds for public welfare projects, we place emphasis on south and north traditional projects sites. We run ongoing projects in Sichuan, Yunnan, and the other western China regions—developing and expanding our projects in both scale and subject variety. We also encourage experimentation with projects to see what works in each individual case, and we encourage open communication among the regions and different cities.

I. Basic education and school education focus: Human base, Satisfy needs.

Since Zigen’s inception, the organization has emphasized the human-centered sustainable development approach in helping to develop village elementary school and junior high school projects. In 2010, the village elementary school and junior high school still formed the core of Zigen projects and received most of the fund distribution.

The tuition supplement is the key Zigen tool in enabling project success. The tuition supplement supports all students coming from the poorest regions. In 2010, total disbursed scholarship and tuition supplement reached $217,270, making public welfare 31.4% of Zigen's 2010 funding.

All these scholarships helped to support 925 students from poor regions at levels of elementary school, high school and college. Guizhou province receives the most support from Zigen as it remains one of the poorest provinces in China. In 2010, China Zigen in Guizhou helped 530 students in elementary school, high school, and college.

This comprised 57.2% of all Zigen tuition supplements. Scholarships totaled $186,742, making up 54% of the total scholarship fund.

Zigen also supports most village schools in underprivileged regions by providing them with basic facilities, teaching facilities, books, and equipment. All these schools still experience financial difficulties with maintaining facilities, classroom chairs, and desks. In 2010, China Zigen supported 19 projects, each at a cost of under $4,400. Even that modest amount improved the teaching and living conditions of each school; there was marked improvement in the quality of education and the experience. In addition, Zigen supports the "Love of Books" project at other schools, designed to enhance the after school experience for students by supplementing regular class education.

In recent years, China Zigen has concerned itself with the overall arrangement and implementation of village education in underdeveloped regions. We have pinpointed the main problem as being the process of "che dian bing xiao" ("to move schools from less populated areas to more populated areas"), which affects public education.

Zigen also focused on improving the quality of life for students boarding at their schools. In 2010, in Qinglong County in Hebei and Fang County in Hubei, we launched a nutrition program. In Hubei's Fang County, the soy bean project was initiated in 13 elementary schools and only cost $18,584.

Part of Zigen's goals is always to promote local relations within the village education community. In 2010, Zigen continued to develop after school programs in Beijing, Hebei, Shanxi, and Sichuan. The after school program includes local art, dance, singing, a local teaching curriculum, special education, etc.

School projects in 2010 included the Shanxi and Guizhou provinces which implemented village teacher supplement projects.

During 2010, Zigen has contributed $346,901, about 67% of Zigen project for elementary, high school and college tuition supplement; school construction; nutrition project; after school project and teacher's supplemental purposes.

II. Continuing Education focus: Teaching Skills and Showing Demos

Zigen's mission and principles on education have always been formal education combines with informal education, institutional teaching combines with continuing education. Together, they create a lifetime of learning environments. In 2010, China Zigen has added many projects on continuing education with a total finance of $14,677, occupying 3% of Zigen's total project funding.

Among the many projects on continuing education, our focus is the rural teacher training projects. In 2010, China Zigen has set up "New Concept Rural Teacher Training Program" to select seed teachers in Hebei QingLong, Hubei FangXian, and Yunan LanChang. The preparations for second and third rounds of this training program have also been started. The program expenses from the three districts total 320,000 yuan. This program supports China's "New Teaching Reform" policies and has enjoyed great successes. This program has built up precious experiences and connections that Zigen needs for future strategies based on different focus groups and multi-theme continuing education projects.

The key points of "New Concept Rural Teacher Training Program" in 2010 include: encourage classroom participations and thinking inspirations; focus on communications between educators and trainees; adopt small-classroom teaching; encourage trainees' initiative thinking and participations. A specially designed model called "2+2+2" based on "Trainer of Trainer" (TOT) model is used to find the best local teachers as the seed trainees. Teaching materials and test books are thoughtfully prepared. Classes are being taught seriously and thoroughly. Team building is also a key to the program. Other important areas are to cooperate closely with the local governments; to support China's official educational policies; and to meet the specific local needs.

Besides the "New Concept Rural Teacher Training Program", China Zigen has actively participated in many other continuing educational programs. The programs include the following: a teacher assisted newspaper that cooperates with Hebei QingLong Department of Education and QingLong Teaching Institute; a summer English Teacher Training program in ShanXi ShiLou; supplies computer equipment to 5 counties' technical institutes in Hebei QingLong; supports free newspaper and teaching programs launched by QingLong Department of Education; provides equipment to Tumenzi Technical School in QingLong; supports rural medical assistants to join technical classes in Guizhou Taijiang; supports trainees to attend programs in LiMing, Yunnan YuLong; etc.

III. Mutual assistance between schools focus: health, development, and environment

China Zigen proposed project parameters and models for “one village one school” and “mutual assistance between schools”. In 2010, China Zigen reaffirmed and improved the “one village one school” program, conducted program assessments, and expanded the cluster of projects to 15 village schools in four provinces. “One village one school” also incorporates villages into program which supports basic needs and capacity building in health, livelihood, development and the environment.

In the area of health and medicine, we enacted a project to provide medical equipment and subsidize medical fees in Huaguo village, located in the Gehetou township of Hebei, Province's Qinglong County. In Gehetou Township, our projects have helped provide medical equipment for local clinics and disseminated information on health issues. We had also partnered with local officials in Qinglong County to implement the project “deliver health into schools and farms” in the county's boarding schools. In Guizhou province's Leishan County, we implemented informational campaigns on women's health in Maoping village, Dunan village, and Nanmeng village. The total program cost for health-related projects in 2010 was $4,475.

In the area of supporting villager livelihood and grassroots development, we used lessons learned from Zigen's many years of experience to implement a variety of projects in Hebei, Shanxi, Guizhou, and other provinces that are suited to local needs and conditions. Total program cost in 2010 was $20,502. These projects not only focus on vulnerable groups (including children, women, and the elderly) but also stress the organic connections between villages and schools to provide learning opportunities for adults and to build long-lasting learning environments that are well-suited for the social ecology of the villages. Project content are varied, and they include conservation culture in schools, village broadcasting equipment, village bathhouses, village dance troupes, equipment for cultural activities, space for lusheng playing (a traditional instrument), and seed capital for women's activities group.

Zigen has long focused on gender equality and the promotion of equal rights and opportunities for women in rural villages. The women's activities group that was founded in 2009 is a good example of projects that focus on and support women. Members of Zigen's women's activities group are village women in their thirties, many of whom were once students sponsored by Zigen. They hope to use the development of their needlework to improve their economic situation as well as to use this group to spread the traditional Miao art of needlepoint.

Zigen women's activities store opened on December 1, 2010. The members of the activities group used seed capital and zero-interest loans from Zigen to purchase sewing machines, zigzag sewing machines, embroidery machines, and other equipment. They also purchased in bulk fabric and samples from afar to decorate the store's show windows; selected members to learn sewing, embroidery, and other skills; and decided to allow all women from the village, whether members of the activities group or not, to sell their handiwork at the store without a fee. The group's accounting books are expertly kept and transparent. All profits are equally shared among the members. Most importantly, the group members take turns staffing the store on a rotational basis, with two people assigned to a larger stall during market days. The seed capital for the women's activities group is $6700. This project has provided invaluable lessons and an important model for future Zigen projects for women.

In the realm of the environment, 2010 was a year of prolific achievements for China Zigen. In this year, we implemented 17 different kinds of environmental projects, with a total program cost of $44,879. Most of these 17 projects were implemented at the grassroots, and involved a variety of issues, such as resolving problems with drinking water; improving infrastructure to conserve energy (including installing energy conserving stoves; energy conserving kang [heated beds], and bio-gas equipment); as well as improving residential environmental and waste disposal. In addition, we partnered with the Anhui Normal University to implement educational programs at village elementary schools, with a total project cost of $15,000. This project includes creating pamphlets, university student environmental education, grassroots environmental education for students at village elementary schools, and work in environmental protection. This project has been invaluable in expanding Zigen's experience in multilevel partnerships and personnel training in environmental issues.

IV. Migrant workers' center focus: helping each other, servicing the community

In 2010, China Zigen continued to expand its efforts in supporting migrant workers from rural areas who have difficulty earning a livelihood in the cities. Zigen has worked with proactive members in this group to provide community services and collect social resources to enhance interactions both within the migrant worker community and with other social groups, as well as to promote the spirit of teamwork and mutual help. The platforms are in an effort to support schools for the children of migrant workers and migrant workers who live in residential communities and cities. The methods of support include tuition assistance, construction of schools for migrant workers' children, and basic services in migrant workers residential communities, especially services related to basic education.

In 2010, China Zigen supported 17 migrant worker children's schools in Beijing and provided tuition assistance to 278 students (total cost was approximately $8,500 USD) supported 6 small-scale schools supply and equipment projects at 6 migrant workers' children's schools in Beijing. China Zigen also supported additional small-scale school supply and equipment projects at other migrant workers' children's schools, summer training programs for teachers at migrant worker's children's schools in Beijing, environmental educational programs, numerous reading projects in Beijing schools. In addition, China Zigen supported libraries in 4 migrant workers' residential communities and supported activities centers in two residential communities. China Zigen also supported migrant workers and Beijing Xiwang Jiayuan to edit A Collection of Stories from Migrant Workers. The total cost for these projects related to migrant workers and their children was $34,574.

V. Public Education focus: Trials, Demonstrations, Proposals

Besides providing direct supports to the least privileged social groups, Zigen uses other methods such as researches, trial building, case studies, public educational and policy proposals to increase the public's awareness to social and educational issues. By encouraging deep participations in rural educations and developments from all walks of life, Zigen is fulfilling its mission in the society. In 2010, Zigen continues its efforts in the associated areas and deepens the studies and researches. In this year, we have set up theme-based or project-based researches involving rural school closing and combining; rural women supports, rural education, etc. These programs spread in areas of Shanxi ShiLou, Guizhou LeiShan, Henan LanKao, Shanxi LuLiang, Hubei ShuXian, SiChuan ShiMian. In addition, Zigen supports forums in the related areas and cross-field educational training programs. Zigen's public education expense in 2010 was $14,952.

VI. Locally Based; Partnership Building

During the practices of our 2010 projects, we have insisted on the principles of local practice, human-centered concerns, and continuous growth. We hold the beliefs of mutual respects, equality, participation, mutual supports, and self-sufficient. The local governments' generous helps have been a great contribution to our smooth operations. In addition, the key to our successes are the strategic partners in the project areas, including their experiences and wisdom; their initiation and enthusiasm; their participation and local resources. Moreover, local enthusiasts and volunteers have contributed greatly to Zigen's project successes.

Donations and Grants Statistics

I. Donation Summary

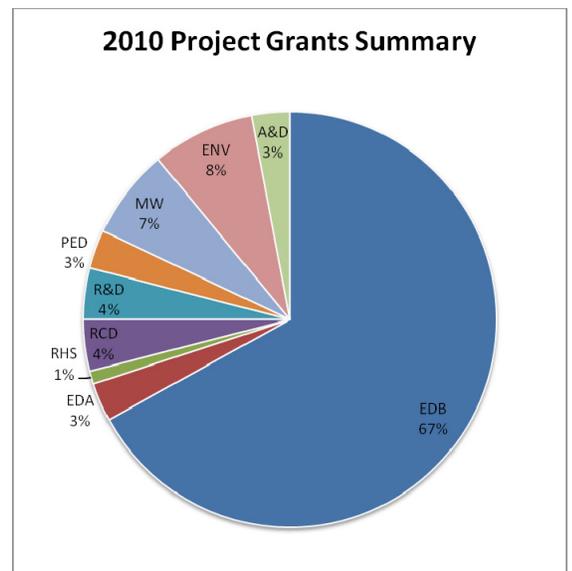

Despite the economic downturn, thanks to our committed supporters, the donations in 2010 totaled $848,853. Our donor size was 498 donors/households or donor groups (note: we count all indirect anonymous donors as one donor since it is impossible to track the donor of each gift). Many of our long-term supporters upgraded their contribution level.

IV. Scholarship Breakdown by Type of School

Because of the increased cost to support each student, the total number of students receiving financial aid decreased from 2,770 to 2,572. However, this drop does not reflect the increased need for financial aids in the impoverished remote and mountainous areas.

As the central government enforces free compulsory education up to junior high school, Zigen continued to allocate more resources to support more post junior high school education.

敬爱的叔叔、阿姨：

很高兴又能给你们写信了，心中那股感激之情不断冲激着我，心中有太多的话想对你说，千言万语不知从何说起，激动过后的第一句话，便是：谢谢你！

你们对我的资助，让我更加努力地学习，成绩也日渐提高了，每当班主任拿着滋根费来到教室，每次不忘说的一句话是：记住你们的恩人呐，是他们帮助了你们啊，这句话令我想起以前在苦难中度过日子，是那么的辛苦，现在有了你们的帮助，真像春风吹拂我的心，温暖了我的心，我把这个好消息告诉父母时，他们热泪盈眶，好久，好久之后，激动的说出一句话：孩子，好好干，好好干，我点头说：会的，我会好好干，在那一刻，成才的思想在我心中生根发芽，也是在那一刻，我记住了你们，永远记住了，你们是我永久的恩人，我的再生父母。

时间如流水，不知不觉间我们已经到了初三下学期，好紧张，压力很大，可我仍然在坚持学习，实现理想，想到了林，我心中便一片光明，微笑悄悄爬上脸颊，是啊，初三又怎么样呢？只要心中有毅力，勇往直前，胜利将会属于我，我坚信，你说对吗？

用着你们辛辛苦苦赚来的血汗钱，心中的感动不言而喻，每次把钱握在手中，我想到的是你们忙碌的身影和疲痛的表情，心中酸楚便一阵阵袭来，使我不禁叹然，可是请你们放心，寄来的钱我都没有乱花，甚至还为家里减轻了些许负担，每一分钱我都使用有序，我保证你们的苦心没有白费，我们会用实际行动证明这一点，我相信不仅是我，整个滋根班的同学都不会让你失望。

每次当我山穷水尽时，你们都会雪中送炭，这更让我深切地体会到你们的帮助具有多么大的意义，我感谢你们，若有机会定当面道谢，以示决心。

在此衷心的祝愿各位滋根基金会的叔叔、阿姨们身体健康，工作顺利，笑口常开。

The Zigen Fund

The Zigen Fund registered as a 501(C)3 nonprofit organization in the U.S with Tax ID 13-3518873. A sister organization, China Zigen Association for Rural Education and Development, is a registered nonprofit in China.

Since 1988, Zigen is an international non-profit that facilitates local partnership programs to address critical needs for people in poverty in China. Zigen breaks the poverty cycle through local partnerships models that are relevant, replicable, and reportable.

Zigen support projects in (1) basic school education; (2) adult education; (3) rural community development (basic health care, environmentally sound technologies and small-scale cultural and economic development).

The characteristics of Zigen's projects include: (1) focus on the people in the poor and remote areas, emphasizing basic needs; (2) encourage local participation and initiatives, aiming to develop local capacity; (3) fund small and manageable projects ($200-$10000), result-oriented and duplicable.

As the government started to implement free compulsory education in China, Zigen continues to support more projects in enhancing quality school education, promoting adult education, access to basic health care, and other rural development areas.

Zigen's work relies on private contributions in the U.S, Hong Kong and Taiwan. We welcome you to be part of Zigen.

Thank you for your continued Support!
